A charity tea was given by the N. N. S. club yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. A. Bailey. 920 Lane there and were received by Mrs. Bailey. Mrs. F. L. Benjamin. Mrs. E. E. Market II. Mrs. W. J. Lewis. Mrs. N. P. Nielson. and Mrs. F. L. Parks. The house was decerated in nearls and carnations, and each guest brought an original valentine. One woman of poetic gifts manufactured a flowle heart valentine, one side punctured by a dart and on the other side the verse. "Lizzie—My heart will jump to summer time. If you will be my valentine; but if you have another hero, kerfop, my heart will drop to zero—Jiminis."

But there is one thing that most of us can do, and that is, "look it up."

It wouldn't take such an appalling amount of time to jot down the little expressions and allusions and scientific terms which you do not understand that crop out from time to time in your reading, and spend an occasional hour in looking them up, would it?

Each bit of information would be only a very little thing, to be sure, but it's infinitesimal insects that slowly form the beautiful coral reef and Lattle drops of water. Little grains of sand that—well, you know the rest.

And the finished product in this case would, of course be some store of education.

And one of the chief features of his self-education is a little custom he has of looking up every word he hears or reads, which he does not fully understand, and writing the word and its definition down on a blackboard in his

The Mysotis club met yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Frank Klingaman, 601 West Tenth street.

Two good looking young girls who were entertaining guests from out of town, asked a young man of their acquaintance who occasionally called on one of the girls of the family to bring four other boys with him the next time he came, so that there would be a beau aplece. Thereupon the young man started out on a recruiting expedition, but could find only two gallant youths who were brave enough to incur the displeasure of the girls of their set by calling at the house of those they were determined not to recognize. The boys are quick to admit that the belies who manage the exclusive circle would offer much less objection to the strangers if they were less good looking and attractive, but they have learned obedience by some past indiscretions, and are willing to leave it to those who control the machinations of social affairs to choose their friends for them.
